“The use of practical KATA simulation really helped with the understanding of the theory, Drew was extremely helpful in teaching and patient in his approach”

G. Wakefield, Senior Manager
Manufacturing Operations, Hologic

WHAT IS 'KATA'?

Originating from Japanese martial arts, Kata (meaning 'form') is a routine practiced in self-defence until the activity becomes a habit. In Lean management, Kata describes a teaching and training method in which techniques are deliberately practiced, preserved and passed on. This creates routine behaviours and problem-solving habits that allow organisations to improve continuously without having to think about it.
